POINT OF

tein, etc. in each meal.

- There are a lot of different diets out there, but the easiest thing you can do is just monitor how much of each thing you are putting in your body. Eating real, whole foods makes it easier to balance these items. Food tracker apps also help you see the composition of different foods as plan your meals.

28. Warm up before and cool down after your workouts.

- It's not a waste of time, it's the best a way to reduce your risk of injury and improve : your performance. Let's start with the warmup. Your warm-up is designed to prepare you • for the workout ahead. Therefore, the way you warm up will vary depending on what you plan to do in your workout. A warm-up for a jog: would involve walking. A warm-up before lifting weights would involve performing some lighter weight sets. Use MYZONE to help your warmup by working a few minutes in the gray, move up to blue, then to green, and finally yellow/red if desired. Cool down by performing your workout at a lower intensity or walking until your : heart rate lowers. And, don't forget stretching!

29. Don't add salt to your food.

- If you're already eating whole, fresh foods, this isn't such a big issue, however. most packaged foods already contain high levels of sodium, so adding more only increases your intake. Most Americans consume more than double the recommended level of sodium a day (2,300 mg), which can raise blood pressure and lead to heart disease and stroke.

30. Make dark chocolate your 'indulgence i food.'

- In case you haven't heard, dark chocolate is better for you than milk or white chocolate. One of the biggest benefits of dark chocolate is that it can lead to a decrease in blood pressure (with a healthy diet). Aim for dark chocolate with a cacao percentage of at least 70% to reap these health benefits, and, as with all indulgences, moderation is key.

31. Take a walk. Walking is a calming activity that helps you stay healthy without requiring any equipment.

Regular 30-minute walks can help control hypertension and slow the progress of : osteoporosis. Take regular walks throughout the week to stay on track!

ful coconut production, standing as ASEAN's second-largest producer. With over 347 million metric tons harvested annually in 2018, coconuts thrive in 69 of the 82 Philippine provinces. Notably, the Davao Region contributes over half of this output.

Beyond the traditional uses of coconuts for fruit, milk, and oil, its nectar turned into sugar also provides a sweet opportunity. Layzel Bocol, a 29-year-old from General Santos City, tapped into this opportunity and started her coco sugar business in 2019 from 2007 to 2017. Growing up, Layzel witnessed the process of coco sugar production, so when a buver came insearch for a coco sugar manufacturer in 2019, she did not hesitate and accepted the offer of producing coco sugar with the agreement that the buyer would be financing the operation challenges were not foreign to Layzel The funds from her buyer were insufficient, which led her to seek additional support from CARD. Inc. (A Microfinance NGO) starting 2016. Their loan supported her business, but 2020 posed a new obstacle with the global health crisis. Production dwindled but hegan its recovery in the latter part of 2022.

However startup
